The Power of Multiplication

One of the best books I've ever read was Robert Coleman's Master Plan of Evangelism. Though a short read, Coleman outlines Jesus' strategy to reach the world. Jesus invested most of His time into training and developing 12 men who would carry on His work after He was gone.

Jen and I have used this book with countless students in our effort to develop leaders who would invest their time multiplying themselves into others who would in turn do the same. The result is an exponential increase of laborers and growth of His kingdom.

For the last few years, Jen and I have been involved in launching ethnic movements throughout our region (CA, AZ and Hawaii). We started when we were at UC Davis and have continued in our current role as Ethnic Ministry Directors. Growth has been slow and steady but we see signs of the power of multiplication taking effect.

Just a few years ago, we created a new team that in 3 years, has started Destino ministries at Cal State Long Beach and Cal State Fullerton. Last month, students from those ministries spent their spring break at Cal State San Bernardino, reaching out to students and seeking to start a new Destino ministry on that campus.

Alice Cordova, a part time staff member with Destino who was involved as a student at Long Beach State, said "I had never been part of launching of a movement before and I realized that this time I wasn't just sharing my faith but instead I was being intentional about the people I wanted to connect with. I didn't just want to give away a flyer but engage in memorable conversations with people to be able to identify students who could perhaps become potential leaders to help carry the newborn movement."

After two days of engaging with students on campus, Alice explained that "we did follow-up calls and texts to remind students to join us for free lunch at the very first Destino info meeting." Amazingly, over 20 students showed up to that meeting to hear about the vision for Destino and 8 students stayed afterward to learn how they could be a part of helping to start Destino at Cal State San Bernardino. In the weeks that have passed, this group of students has continued to meet and get to know each other. Destino is well on its way to becoming an "official" organization on campus.

Praise God for what He is doing in seeing more movements launched to reach students of every culture. Thank you for your partnership in reaching students and please pray with us for Destino at Cal State San Bernardino!
